

Whistleblower Policy

Diane Lane-Hutchings
HR Manager

You are encouraged to report to your supervisor or other appropriate manager all evidence of business conduct by a Company employee (including that is illegal, unethical or dishonest). You can also make a report through the anonymous form on our website (<https://cpcs.ca/about/integrity/>), which is directed to an independent director on the Board of CPCS. This whistleblower policy protects any Company employee who reports such incidents in good faith.

What is a "whistleblower"?

A "whistleblower" for purposes of this policy is defined as an employee of the Company who reports illegal or unethical activities by any Company employee to one or more of the responsible parties specified in this policy, particularly activities that may constitute:

- An instance of corporate fraud;
- A violation of the Company's Code of Ethics;
- A violation of federal, state or local law, including federal, state or local anti-bribery or anti-corruption laws;
- A substantial and specific danger to the health and welfare of the Company's employees or the public; or
- Billing for services not performed or goods not delivered and other fraudulent financial reporting.

Reporting evidence of misconduct

In general, if you receive or witness evidence of illegal or dishonest business conduct by the Company, you are to contact your immediate supervisor or your supervisor's manager. If you are not satisfied by the supervisor's or manager's response, or are uncomfortable for any reason addressing your concerns to your supervisor or supervisor's manager, you may contact the Company's Corporate Affairs Manager to report your concerns.

With respect to matters regarding the integrity of the Company's financial reporting, you are to contact the Vice President, Finance. If you are not satisfied with the Vice President, Finance response or are uncomfortable for any reason addressing your concerns with the VP Finance, you may contact a member of the Company's parent's Audit Committee. The Corporate Affairs Manager will put you in contact with the parent company Audit Committee if you do not know how to reach them.

With respect to matters regarding a violation of federal, state and local anti-bribery or anti-corruption legislation please refer specifically to the "Points of Contact" section in the Anti-Corruption Compliance Program.

The employee must exercise sound judgment to avoid baseless allegations. An employee who intentionally files a false report of wrongdoing will be subject to discipline up to and including termination. However, the whistleblower is not responsible for investigating the activity or for determining fault or corrective measures; appropriate management officials are charged with these responsibilities.

Protections for whistleblowers

Whistleblower protections are provided in two important areas -- confidentiality and against retaliation.

Confidentiality – To the maximum extent possible, the confidentiality of the whistleblower will be maintained. However, identity may have to be disclosed to conduct a thorough investigation, to comply with the law and to provide accused individuals their legal rights of defense.

No Retaliation -- The Company will not retaliate against a whistleblower. This includes, but is not limited to, protection from retaliation in the form of an adverse employment action such as termination, compensation decreases, or poor work assignments and threats of physical harm. You should note, however, that the right of a whistleblower for protection against retaliation does not include immunity for any personal wrongdoing.

If you believe you are the subject of retaliation, you must contact the Human Resources Manager immediately. Employees found to have engaged in acts of retaliation will be subject to disciplinary action, up to and including termination for cause.
